

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. deceased, and all his fortune devised to his relict, my mother.

Mrs. Mech. What, the whole!

Y. Lov. Every shilling. That is, for her life. Mrs. Mech. And to what sum may it amount?

Y. Lov. Why, my mother is eternally telling me, that after her, I shall inherit fifty or fixty thousand at least.

Mrs. Mech. Upon my word, a capital fum.

2. Lov. But of what use, my dear Mrs. Mechlin, fince she refuses to advance me a guinea upon the credit of it, and while the grass grows——You know the proverb.———

Mr. Mech. What, I suppose you want something for present subsistence?

Y. Lov. Just my fituation.

Mrs. Mech. Have you thought of nothing for yourself?

Y. Lov. I am resolved to be guided by you.

Mrs. Mech. What do you think of a wife?

2. Lou. A wife!

Mrs. Mech. Come, come, don't despise my advice; when a young man's finances are low, a wise is a much better resource than a usurer; and there are in this town a number of kind-hearted widows that take a pleasure in repairing the injuries done by fortune to handsome young fellows.

Har. Mrs. Mechlin has reason.

Y. Low. But, dear ma'am, what can I do with a wife.

Mrs. Mech. Do! why like other young fellows who marry ladies a little stricken in years; make her your banker and steward. If you say but the word, before night I'll give you a widow with two thousand a year in her pocket.

Woodf. With your help, sir, I should hope for their union, upon this occasion at least.

Serj. Well, sir, I shall re-consider your papers, and, if there are probable grounds, I may be induced to hear your proposals.

Woodf. Nay then, sir, the recovering my paternal possessions makes me anxious indeed—
Could I hope that the young lady's good wish would attend me!

Sir Luke. Be quiet, Mrs. Circuit.—Come, good folks, I will set all matters to rights in a minute; and first, Mr. Serjeant, it becomes me to tell you, that I never intended to marry your daughter.

Serj. How! never!

Sir Luke. Never. She is a fine girl I allow; but would it now, Mr. Serjeant, have been honest in me, to have robb'd the whole sex of my person, and confin'd my favours to her?

Serj. How!

Sir Luke. No! I was struck with the immorality of the thing; and therefore to make it impossible that you should ever give me your daughter, I invented the story I told you concerning Mrs. Circuit and me.

Serj. How!

Sir Luke. Truth, upon my honour.—Your wife

Sir Rob. Aye, for you. No billet-doux, no rivate meetings, no stealing into your chamer before the servants were out of their peds?

Lydia. Amazing! and who, Sir, has dared to infinuate—

Sir Rob. Infinuate! why the tale is the talk of the town: all the morning papers are full on't.

Lydia. What can, Sir, be the meaning of this? is it possible you can think, Sir, your daughter so abandoned, so lost——

Sir Rob. Hey!

Lydia. Recollect, dear Sir, I beseech you, have I, in the whole course of my life, ever once dared to deceive you?

Sir Rob. Why, Child, I can't fay that you have. But in this case, there is such positive proof.

Lydia. Of what kind, I beseech you?

Sir Rob. Facts, facts, well attested; so don't pretend to deny.

Lydia. Attested! by whom?

Sir Rob. Their names are needless at prefent. But what motive or interest could any one have to invent, or propagate?

Lydia. None, that I can discover; but, however strong the appearance, if either in thought, word, or deed, there has any thing, either criminal or culpable, passed between me and——

Sir Rob. What, no declarations? no interviews?

O'Flam. The devil a one.

O'Flam. O yes, a parcel of nobodies, that died worth nothing at all. Fellows that can't pay for a funeral. Upon my conscience, I can't think what becomes of the folks; for my part, I believe all the people who live in town, fall down dead in the country, and then too, since Doctor Dispatch is gone to the Bath, patients linger so long.

Sir Chr. Yes, firrah, it is; and all owing to my acquaintance with you: I, forfooth, am called your adviser; as if your own contriving head and profligate heart stood in need of any affistance from me.

Rack. Well, but, dear Sir Kit, how can this idle stuff affect you?

Sir Chr. How? easy enough: I will be judged now by Poultice.—Peter, speak truth! before this here blot in my escutcheon, have not you observed, when I went to either a ball or a breakfasting, how eagerly all the girls gathered round me, gibing, and joking, and giggling? gad take me, as facetious and free as if I were their father!

Poul. Nothing but truth.

Fillup. That's truth, to my zertain knowledge; for I have zeen the women-folk tittering, 'till they were ready to break their zides, when your honour was throwing your double tenders about.

Sir Chr. True, honest Fillup.—Before your cursed affair, neither maid, widow, or wife was ashamed of conversing with me; but now, when I am wheeled into the room, not a soul under seventy will venture within ten yards of my chair: I am shunned worse than a leper in the days of King Lud; an absolute hermit in the midst of a croud! Speak, Fillup, is not this a melancholy truth?

Fillup. Very molycolly, zure!

Sir Chr. But this is not all; the crop-eared curs of the city have taken it into their empty heads to neglect me: Formerly, Mr. Mayor could not devour a custard, but I received a civil card to partake; but now, the rude rascals, in their bushy bobs, brush by me without deigning to bow! in short, I do not believe I have B4 had

Mrs. Lin. Indeed, my dear Miss, but I don't! what else could induce you to reject the addresses of a lover like this? Ten thousand pounds a year! Gads my life, there is not a lady in town would refuse him, let her rank be ever so—

Miss Lin. Not his fortune, I firmly believe.

Mrs. Lin. Well! and who now-a-days marries any thing else? Would you refuse an estate, because it happened to be a little encumbered? you must consider the man in this case as a kind of a mortgage.

Miss Lin. But, the disproportion of years-

Miss Lin. About it! about what?

Rim. About this here business that I come about. Pray, Miss, are you fond of the country?

Miss Lin. Of the country!

Flint. Ay: Because why, I think it is the most prettiest place for your true lovers to live in; something so rural! For my part, I can't see what pleasure pretty Misses can take in galloping to plays, and to balls, and such expensive vagaries; there is ten times more pastime in serching walks in the fields, in plucking of dai-sies—

Miss Lin. Haymaking, feeding the poultry, and milking the cows.

Miss Liv. It must be owned they are pretty employments for ladies.

Scene changes to the Chymist's.

Enter Invoice and Harriet, through the fash.

Inv. Safely landed, however.

Har. Are you fure you are not pursued?

Inv. Not a foul: Never fear! they will hardly venture this road.

Har. What a step have you induced me to take! to what distress and difficulties have I exposed mysels!

Inv. Banish your fears, and let us look forward, my love.

Har. Nay, I have gone too far to retreat.

Well, Sir, what is next to be done?

Inv. The Spaniards are naturally generous; perhaps, upon hearing our story, the owner of the house may lend his assistance. This, I suppose, is the Laboratory, and this door leads to the shop.

Devil [in a bottle.] Heigh-ho!

Her. Who is that?

Inv. That! where?

Her. Did not you hear a voice?

Inv. None. Fancy, my love; only your fears. Devil. Heigh ho!

Har. There again!

Inv. I hear it now.—Who is there?

Devil. Me.

Inv. Me? he speaks English! Who and where are you?

Devil. Here in this bottle: where I have been cork'd up for these fix months.

Inv. Cork'd up in a bottle! I never heard of fuch a thing in my life, unless, indeed, in the Haymarket once.—Cork'd up in a bottle, d'ye say?

Devil. Ay; by the master of this house, a magician.

Inv. A magician! Why then you are a spirit, I suppose.

Devil. You are right; I am the Devil.

Har. Mercy on us!

Devil. Don't be terrified, Miss: You remember the old proverb, " The Devil is not so black " as he is painted."

Inv. Well, but Sir-

Har. That's true, indeed!

Devil. Believe me, Miss, as matters stand, we can be of mutual use: Your lover may deliver me from from prison, and I can prevent you both from going into confinement.

Inv. What fays my Harriet? shall I rely on the gentleman's word?

Devil. Do, madam! I am a Devil of honour. Besides, you have but a little time to consider; in less than sive minutes, you will have the Conful and all his crew in the house.

Inv. Nay, then—Pray which is the bottle?

Devil. That in the middle, right before you.

Inv. There it goes!

[He breaks the bottle, and Devil rifes out of it. Ibunder.

Har. Oh, what a-

Devil. I am not surprized, Miss, that you are a little shocked at my figure: I could have assumed a much more agreeable form; but as we are to be a little better acquainted, I thought it best to quit all disguise and pretence; therefore, madam, you see me just as I am.

Har. I am sure, Sir, you are ve-ve-very agreeable.

Devil. Yo -yo -you are pleased to compliment, madam. -Come, answer me sincerely; am I such a being as you expected to see?

Har. Really, Sir, I can hardly fay what I ex-

Devil. I own it is a puzzling question; at least, if the world does us justice in the contradictory qualities they are pleased to afford us.

Inv. You will forgive me, if I don't understand

Devil. Without doubt.

Inv. And pray, Sir—I hope, no offence; but I would not be wanting in proper respect—are you, when at home, of condition? or how must I——

Devil. You mean, am I a Devil of fashion, or one of the base born?

Inv. I do.

Devil. I have no reason to be ashamed of my family.

Inv. I don't doubt it. You will forgive me, if I make a mistake: Perhaps, my lord Lucifer.

Devil. Who?

Inv. Lord Lucifer.

Devil. Lord Lucifer? how little you know of our folks! Lucifer a lord! Why, that's the meanest rascal amongst us.

Inv. Indeed!

Devil. Oh, a paltry mechanic! the very genius of jobbing! a mere Bull and Bear booby; the patron of lame ducks, brokers, and fraudulent bankrupts.

Inv. You amaze me! I vow I always thought him a principal agent.

Devil. He! Not at all. The fellow, indeed, gave himself some airs of importance, upon sollowing the camp, and having the Contractors and Commissaries under his care; but that affair, you know, closed with the war.
